August 10, 2012

Texas Rehabilitation Hospital of Fort Worth (TRH) is proud to announce its' achievement of CARF Accreditation for both the Adult Hospital Inpatient Rehabilitation Program, as well as the Adult Inpatient Stroke Specialty Program.

CARF International – the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities – has awarded Texas Rehabilitation Hospital of Fort Worth a three-year accreditation, indicating our hospitals' dedication and commitment to improving the quality of lives of the persons we serve. CARF has also commended TRH for our ongoing commitment and consistent efforts to improve the quality of our programs.

Accreditation is a continuous process, letting the public know that Texas Rehabilitation Hospital of Fort Worth is committed to continuously improving services, encouraging feedback, and serving our community. Accreditation also demonstrates our commitment to enhancing performance, managing risk, and distinguishing our service delivery.

This high level of accreditation is a definite reflection upon the expertise that each of our staff brings to our hospital in order to care for the patients within our community, making Texas Rehabilitation Hospital of Fort Worth the only CARF accredited rehabilitation hospital for both inpatient services and stroke specialty services within our community.
